Earnings Update

SOFTCHOICE CORPORATION

Staffing Up For Growth

Our Conclusion

Softchoice staffed up in H1, adding the capacity for higher growth and reaching its target for full-year account executive headcount by mid-year. However, the company has begun to see some softness in the Enterprise channel, noting a slower-than-expected ramp in territorial expansion and a reduction in spending from some Enterprise customers. In an uncertain macro environment, the company's 2022 guide remains back-end loaded, despite an adjusted EBITDA margin guide that was reduced by 350 bps at the mid-point. We see recent headcount additions as positioning the company well for future growth, but expect it to take several quarters for new hires to become productive, especially given the current environment. We retain our Neutral rating and C$21 price target.

Key Points

Slowdown In Enterprise: Softchoice updated its 2022 expectations with Q2 results, with gross profit of >$320MM now expected to be closer to $320MM and adjusted EBITDA margin of ~30% now expected to 25%-28%. The company cited a slowdown at some Enterprise customers as the reason for the revision, with a decline in spend at a few of its larger accounts. Enterprise customers comprise ~10% of Softchoice's customer base, but about a quarter of the company's gross profit. Management noted that the decline was based on company-specific factors (M&A, etc.) versus a broader slowdown in the market.

Investing In Sales: Softchoice is tracking ahead of its account executive (AE) hiring plan, reaching a total of 424 AEs at the end of Q2, already within its year-end target range of 423-433. In the current environment, the company has also seen some wage inflation in certain pockets of the organization. Combined, we expect a near-term drag on earnings as new hires move up the productivity curve. That said, Project Monarch benefits should partially offset, with gross profit per AE up 20% on a TTM basis and up slightly from year-end 2021. Total customer count was roughly flat Q/Q, but LTM net dollar retention remained strong at 113% as gross profit per customer increased on an LTM basis.

EBITDA Expected To Be Back-half Weighted: Even with the margin guidance reduction, the company's adjusted EBITDA is expected to be backhalf weighted, with our forecast suggesting that a little under 60% of annual EBITDA will fall in the second half. This appears roughly in line with historic seasonality, with second-half EBITDA contributions in 2020 and 2021 of 60% and 55%, respectively. Given the uncertain macro-economic climate, we do see more risk to the full-year guide than in prior years.
